(NewsWire.net -- October 20, 2015) Raleigh, NC -- Real Property Management Wake County has announced a complementary property assessment for rental property owners to help them understand how to best rent their properties. Through the assessment, property owners can get a clear picture of their property's status, how easily it would rent and what a fair rental price would be.

Real Property management is one of the area's top property management firms. As a member of the National Association of Residential Property Managers, Real Property Management has the industry knowledge that will help property owners make wise, informed decisions about their rental properties. The firm also offers a comprehensive list of property management services to those property owners who decide to offer their homes up for rent.

"We found that many property owners come to us with the same questions," said a Real Property Management Wake County spokesperson. "They want to know if there is a market for their home as a rental home, how much they could get for their home for rent each month and what improvements they need to make before putting their home up for rent. By offering this assessment at no cost to property owners, we can answer those questions without putting undue stress on owners who already have a lot on their plates."

For many property owners, an assessment early in the process can improve their rental rate. "During the assessment process," said the spokesperson, "we are able to point out areas where small improvements can make a big difference in rental rate and the quality of the tenants that a property attracts. This benefits our owners by making the entire process less stressful."

To sign up for the assessment, property owners simply need to fill in the form on the Real Property Management Wake County website. A company representative will then contact the property owner to set up a time to do the assessment and discuss property management services.
